excerpt from social ethics an introduction to the nature and ethics of the state nineteen hundred years ago an exile of the roman empire was on a lonely rock in the gean he was not there because he had done his neighbor wrong but because he believed in the coming of an organized society which would not rest on injustice he had even dared to promise the coming of this new social order to the toilers that he met standing on this rock lookout the exile saw a new empire rise such as the world had never known in it were no slaves there were none that suffered wrong and the ruler was a workman with calloused hands while he looked he listened and through the stillness came a voice the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our lord and of his christ the exile believed in the vision and the voice he told what he had seen and heard to others and they with gladness believed with him it was their confidence that not only is there an individual but a social soul to be saved before both of them is righteousness and the kingdom of god and the approach is through a divine man who calls himself the way after nineteen centuries the vision of the exile is not realized and those who have trusted in it must still walk by faith the curse of sin still rests on the fairest works of god about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

this book disturbs the normal and depoliticized meaning of virtue through a genealogical reading of the debates conceptual struggles and ambiguities that were cleansed by virtue ethicists to produce today's conception of excellence this approach provides the narrative raw material to craft a new meaning of excellence as a creative actualization of the potentials for human prosperity the fundamental question asked and addressed about excellence is how communities can use excellence as the organizing principle for political and economic development the author explores how large scale modern societies can be better administered in environments characterized by contingency and possibilities at the very least excellence in societal governance practice should involve the creation of possibilities for community and participation by all its members so that their potentialities can be drawn out for the common good the book also explores the connection between excellence and creativity if excellence is the drive toward actualization of potentialities for all human beings it follows that human creativity is an adequate form for that movement the author not only attempts to trace and clarify the mystique of the creative functions of persons and social groups but also shows how the creative functions of human life can express the unconditional eros of divine creativity in the process of doing all this the author offers a fresh and provocative perspective of philosophy and theology s oldest concerns the good truth beauty justice love hope and the eschatological new creation this is a print on demand book and is therefore non returnable to answer the question of what role the new testament should play in the formation and expression of christian social morality today richard longenecker here proposes a developmental hermeneutic which distinguishes between declared principles and described practices in the new testament writings with this distinction in mind he focuses on the three couplets of galatians 3 28 neither jew nor greek slave nor free male nor female showing how these matters were treated in early christian thought and explaining their meaning for us today in so doing longenecker lays a hermeneutical foundation for the much larger discussion of christian social ethics the purpose of this book is to help you make ethical decisions about what should be done in a given instance whether individual or related to a broad policy it does not do this by telling you but rather by giving you tools to decide for yourself the book offers not so much an ethical map as a gyroscope offering awareness perspective and ability to work out your judgments on two levels 1 appropriate ethical frameworks and 2 real life applications which may coincide with differ from or go beyond the standard rules practices and policies where you are it even includes a chapter on gray area ethics situations even if you are sure of what is right it is not actually possible to be purely ethical because there are negative costs to every available choice you find yourself having to make the best choice rather than the ideally right choice the book is in two parts the first half explores alternative established frameworks for guiding social ethics and their roots within each pros cons and variations are discussed all are good some may be better than others that is for you to decide you may well develop your own hybrid framework which is better than any classic one or you may develop your own hierarchy in which you apply this framework to the extent that it doesn't conflict with or subvert that higher one built on this foundation the second half discusses several applied issues or policies each offers different often conflicting ethical vantage points the purpose is twofold one is to address several important social and economic issues the other is to develop skills for you to apply to dilemmas we face when we apply abstract social ethics to real life this book is good to read and think by yourself it may be even better if you can find others a friend a group a seminar with whom to explore what's right
